

La Parfumerie Qiwa Family

Explications concernant certains ingrédients principaux.

ALCOHOL DENAT: utilisé pour apporter une sensation de fraîcheur au moment de la vaporisation d'un parfum. Sachant qu'il est volatile, il va cependant s'évaporer au contact de la peau pour ne laisser que les différentes notes aromatiques.

L'alcool (éthanol) utilisé dans les produits cosmétiques doit être rendu impropre à la consommation humaine par un procédé spécial de dénaturation, et ce afin qu'il ne puisse pas être avalé par les consommateurs.

COUMARINE: est une substance naturelle organique aromatique connue dans la nomenclature internationale comme 2H-1-benzopyrane-2-one, molécule qui peut être considérée en première approximation comme une lactone de l'acide 2-hydroxy-Z-cinnamique. Son odeur de foin fraîchement coupé a attiré l'attention des parfumeurs sur elle dès le XIXe siècle.

ALPHA-ISOMETHYL IONONE: est un composé organique synthétique et naturel présent dans les levures de bière ou les espèces connues sous le nom de Saccharomyces cerevisiae. Le composé est un isomère de méthyl ionone. Cette molécule synthétique incolore utilisée en parfumerie, fait partie des 26 allergènes réglementés par l'Europe. Ses senteurs florales sont proches de celles de la violette ou de l'iris.

LINALOOL: Le linalol ou linalool est un alcool terpénique, alcool tertiaire, insaturé, possédant une odeur florale et fraîche. On le retrouve notamment dans une majorité d'huiles essentielles notamment celles de lavande, de bergamote, de bois de rose, dont il est le composant majeur, et de menthe.

HYDROXYCITRONELLAL : L'hydroxycitronellal est un liquide incolore, visqueux et huileux. Sa forte odeur sucrée rappelle celle du tilleul ou de la fleur de citronnier. Elle est naturellement présente dans les huiles essentielles de citron, de citron vert, d'orange douce, de petitgrain, de bois de santal, de tangerine et d'ylang-ylang.

CINNAMAL: il fait partie des 26 allergènes réglementés par l'Europe.

BHT : Le butylhydroxytoluène ou BHT est un stabilisant que l'on trouve dans les cosmétiques.
